

Listening into Writing

Gender

THE LONDON SCHOOL
OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE ■

- You are going to hear a TED talk called “Why gender equality is good for everyone — men included”.
- The talk was given by a sociologist called Michael Kimmel.
- It is approximately 15 minutes long.

Task

As in previous weeks:

- Listen to the talk and take notes.
- Use your notes to write a summary of 200-400 words.
- You have 40-minutes to write the summary using your notes.

Note:

In the final assessment, you will have the choice to:

- a) Take your notes by hand and write your summary by hand.
- b) Take your notes by hand but write your summary on your computer.
- c) Take your notes on your computer and write your summary on your computer.

Which approach do you think you will take?

Important!

- If you choose to write your notes and/or summary on your computer, you will have to install Digiexam.
- This is an app used by all departments at LSE.
- After you enter Digiexam, your device will be locked down. This means you can no longer access any other applications on your device.
- You will have an opportunity to practice using Digiexam during the 'Listening into Writing' assessment next Friday and during the practice assessments in Week 5.

Reminder: summary writing format

1. Your summary should be in the form of a paragraph or paragraphs.
2. You should have an introductory sentence that states what the lecture was about.
3. You should outline the key points the speaker.
4. You should not include unnecessary or irrelevant information.
5. For this task, you should not include your own opinions, interpretations, deductions or comments.
6. You should have a concluding sentence that “wraps up” your summary – this could be a simple rephrasing of the main point.
7. You should have a range of reporting expressions and linking words/phrases.
8. The summary should be written in your own words.

Listen & take notes

How your writing score is assessed:

As mentioned in Week 1, the listening and writing contributes 10 marks towards your writing score.

For writing, you will be assessed on:

- Range: did you use a good range of grammar & vocabulary?
- Accuracy: did you avoid making a lot of language errors?
- Style: did you write in an appropriately academic style?
- Structure: are your ideas structured clearly and coherently using a good range of cohesive devices?

How effective was your writing?

- Language range: Do you have a range of reporting expressions? Do you have a range of linking expressions? Do you have a range of sentence structures?
- Language accuracy: Do you communicate your ideas effectively or do language errors make your writing difficult to understand?
- Language style: Is your summary written in an academic style i.e. is the language formal, clear, precise & unbiased?
- Structure: Is the structure of your summary clear? Do you have an effective opening sentence? Do you have an effective concluding statement? Do your sentences/paragraphs link together logically?

Sample summaries

Look at the sample summaries on Moodle and consider their use of language.

How your listening score is assessed:

As mentioned in Week 1, the listening and writing contributes 60 marks towards your listening score.

For listening, you will be assessed on:

- Accuracy: did you report the lecture content accurately?
- Paraphrasing: did you paraphrase what the speaker said (rather than copying verbatim)?
- Length: is your summary an appropriate length?
- Content: does your summary cover the key points?
- Focus: is your summary appropriate in terms of detail and depth?

How effective was your listening?

Ask someone to read your summary and answer the questions below:

- Language range: Do you have a range of reporting expressions? Do you have a range of linking expressions? Do you have a range of sentence structures?
- Language accuracy: Do you communicate your ideas effectively or do language errors make your writing difficult to understand?
- Language style: Is your summary written in an academic style i.e. formal, clear, precise & unbiased?
- Structure: Is the structure of your summary clear? Do you have an effective opening sentence? Do you have an effective concluding statement? Do your sentences/paragraphs link together logically?

Did you include most of these points?

1. Gender equality is about men as well as women
2. Men can react in different ways to gender equality. For example, some are supportive, seem supportive but 'mansplain'; others are openly resistant.
4. Making gender visible to men is the first step to engaging men to support gender equality. Men also need to recognise their historical privilege.
5. Men should support gender equality because:
 - a) It's fair and right
 - b) It's good for countries: the happiest countries are the most gender equal
 - c) It's good for companies: gender equality promotes retention, satisfaction and productivity
 - d) It's good men, their children and partners: gender equality promotes happiness, health & relationships
6. Gender equality is a win-win for everyone & we cannot fully empower women and girls unless we engage boys and men.

Look at the sample summaries

- Did they include the points on the previous slide? If so, how effective were they?

Mansplain

- Attributed to Rebecca Solnit who wrote an article called Men Explain Things to Me in 2008
- Added to the Oxford dictionary in 2014
- Means to explain something to a woman in a condescending way that assumes she has no knowledge about the topic.
