

Dilemma 1: The Job Interview

During an interview for your dream job, the interviewer assumes you have experience using a particular piece of software.

You don't, but you could probably learn it quickly.

Would you correct them?

Dilemma 2: The Cheating Friend

During an important exam, you notice your close friend looking at answers on their phone.

Nobody else seems to notice.

What would you do?

Dilemma 3: The Restaurant Bill

After an expensive meal, you realise the restaurant has forgotten to charge you for £40 worth of food.

Would you tell them?

Dilemma 4 – The Queue

You've been waiting for 30 minutes in a long queue.

A friend suddenly appears near the front and offers to let you join them.

Would you accept?

Dilemma 5 – The Secret

A close friend tells you something very personal and makes you promise not to tell anyone. You make the promise.

Later, you realise that keeping the secret could cause serious problems for somebody else – and for you.

Would you break your promise?

Dilemma 6 – The Honest Opinion

Your friend proudly shows you something they've created and asks:

"Do you genuinely think it's good?"

You think it's terrible.

What would you say?