

Hong Shao Rou

This is everything you need! It can feed 4 people.

- 2X boxes of pork belly
- 12 Green onions
- 8-10 slices of ginger
- 5-6 pieces of garlic
- 3-5 star anise
- 4 big spoons of sugar
- 2 big spoons of Shaoxing wine
- 8-10 big spoons of dark soy sauce
- 8-10 big spoons of light soy sauce
- (Some chilies if you like it spicy)
- (Salt, if you want to use less soy sauce)

- 1) In your pan, add: a) 4 sliced green onions, b) 4-5 slices of ginger, c) 3 pieces of garlic, sliced, d) 2 star anise.

- 2) Add boiling water to this, and keep it on a small fire.

- 3) Cut all the pork into chunks, like this.

- 4) Add the pork to the pan with the green onions, ertc.

- 5) When it starts boiling again, add 2 spoons of Shaoxing wine. Leave it to boil for about 10 minutes. The pork will shrink and become a grey colour.

- 6) While the pork is boiling, you can prepare for the next part. Slice up: a) 8 green onions, b) 6 slices of ginger, c) 4 more garlicks and d) get 3-4 more star anise. You can also add chilies if you like it spicy!

- 7) When the pork has boiled for about 10 minutes, drain away the water. Move the pork into the pan again, and throw away the green onion, garlic, star anise – you don't need this anymore.

- 8) Fry the pork in a hot wok/deep frying pan with some oil. After about 4 minutes, it will start to turn brown.

- 9) When all the pork has started to brown, add your 4 spoons of sugar, and keep stirring/frying. After about 4 more minutes, the pork will become a gold colour. Be very careful, as hot sugar can burn badly if it gets on your skin!

- 10) After the pork becomes gold, you can add the rest of the green onion, garlic, ginger and star anise. Stir it for about 2 minutes until the green onion goes slightly soft.

- 11) Add 8 spoons of dark soy sauce, and then 8 spoons of light soy sauce. If you don't like to add too much soy sauce, you could use some salt instead.

12) Next add hot water so that all the meat and vegetables are covered (this will stop it drying). Then, turn the fire to the lowest setting. Cover your pan, if you have a lid. Leave it to cook for 90 minutes on the lowest fire. Check it every 30 minutes to make sure it isn't dry – add more water if the level is too low.

If you do not have a lid, you will need to check it every 10 minutes to make sure it hasn't dried up.

13) After 90 minutes, remove the lid and turn up the fire. Keep stirring during this part so that the sugar does not burn.

14) After 10 minutes, you will notice that it becomes thicker, and darker.

15) After 15-20 minutes, it's ready! Enjoy!
