

LN3905 Assignment Format

Week 5 Workshop

THE LONDON SCHOOL
OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE ■

Format Requirements

At LSE, your Department will require your work to follow certain presentation guidelines.

We do the same on this course. Please ensure that your work is formatted according to the requirements outlined on these slides (the same as in the Week 1 writing booklet).

These slides are available on Moodle in the Writing & Assignment Week 5 section.

1. Font

Highlight all your text, including the reference list.

Change it to either Arial or Times New Roman.

Change the size to 11 or 12.

Your work should look professional, so titles and headings can be larger sizes, underlined, Bold etc.

2. Paragraphing

Highlight all your text, including the reference list.

Press the bottom right box on the “Paragraph” section.

On the menu below, choose 1.5 (or double, if you prefer).

3. Leave a Space between Paragraphs

Check your work and make sure there is an empty space between all paragraphs so that it is very clear where one ends and the next begins.

This is demonstrated in Dragoş and Hughson's (2024) research on the free speech 'crisis' in HE which details how the media and thinktanks constructed the issue (through deliberate elite strategy enabled by structural media conditions), how it was subsequently advocated by NGOs, and eventually became significant enough to influence legislation. In this process, the elite's interests are disseminated through the structural constitution of media institutions.

A striking demonstration of the above theories is found in recent research from Ipsos (Katwala et al., 2025) which highlights that the British public routinely overestimate migration figures. When polled, 56% of respondents believed that migration had risen in 2025 compared to 2024: just 14% knew that it had in fact decreased by half. Moreover, the public believed 33% of immigrants to be asylum seekers, rising to 51% amongst migration sceptics (Katwala et al., 2025). In reality, this figure is just 14%, raising important questions as to why the public conception is so inaccurate. Since the public are largely reliant on the media for their information (Allen, 2016), a large part of the explanation lies in how immigration has been framed. The BBC, as a highly regulated and politically neutral outlet, is a revealing exemplar.

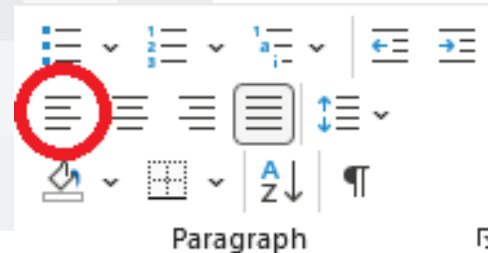

4. Justify your Text

Highlight all your main body text, but NOT the reference list.

On the “Paragraph” tab again, choose this option to square off the text:

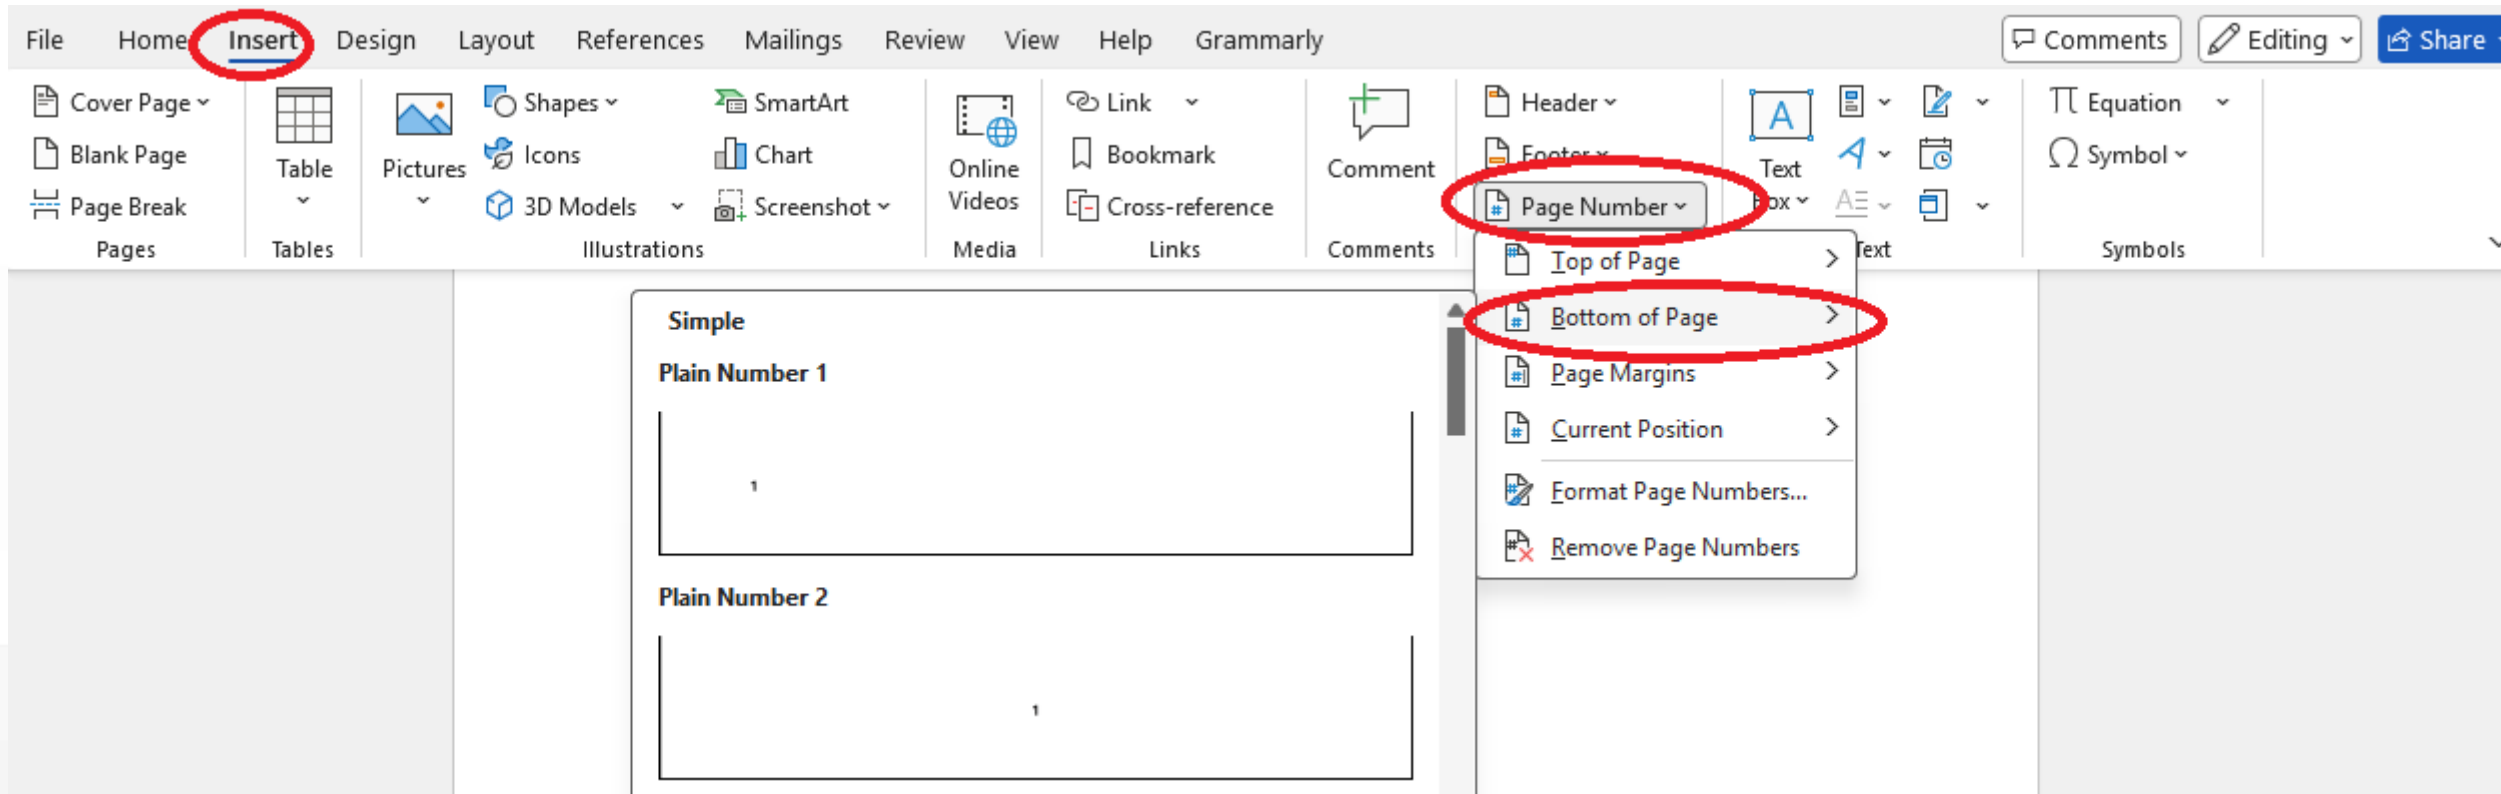

Now, highlight your reference list & left justify it:

5. Add Page Numbers

6. Add a Cover Page

You can copy/paste the template on Moodle if you like.

Alternatively, just ensure your first page includes:

- The title
- Your name
- Your writing tutor's name (Umair Ahsan, Simon Mathews or Jim Pavitt)
- The deadline date
- The word count

7. References

Ensure your reference list begins on a new page after your conclusion, not the same page.

Ensure that your list is organised in alphabetical order, A-Z.

Ensure that they are all formatted accurately, and universally (they include the correct information, and they look the same).
